Local company HEG Australia is keeping things close to home with its decision to move manufacturing of the HEG, a peg with hooks, to South Australia.

Last year's Good Design award-winning HEG was recently featured on Channel 10's national Shark Tank program, with some of the country's top business leaders impressed by the design.

HEG inventor Scott Boocock said he was

"really worried to be something that was not only 'Made in Australia' but built in Australia by Australians and that supported the local manufacturing industry."

Mr Boocock said dedication and research enabled him to establish a network of businesses – including Fingo Product Development in Henley Beach, Technical Plus in St Marys, Multi Slide Industries of Edwardstown and Montana Packaging – to make the HEG truly 100 per cent South Australian built.

"We are also proud to partner with Bedford Group and China, two disability services that assemble and package the HEGS to be sent globally," Mr Boocock said.
